A Message From Our President

Beannachdan,

As I am sure many of our members are settling into a season of tradition and fellowship with cherished friends and family, so does our Society move into a season of celebration. Robbie Burns will soon be rapping at the door for his birthday.

Years ago, I attended my first Burns Supper with a small group of individuals who asked what I knew about Robert Burns. Apart from all the usual answers, ones that you'd think would be on a school test; did he like the ladies? Was he poor? What did his Father do? I was challenged to present The Immortal Memory. The thought encouraged me to delve into his life and to learn more about Scotland's Bard.

A good friend of mine encouraged me to pick up a book of his works and to familiarize myself with what he actually wrote. In this process, I came across his work titled Frae The Friends and Land I Love. In this stanza, ...Till the Fates, nae mair severe, Friendship, love and peace restore..., the work goes on to speak of a return of the individual to something pure and mindful of home.

That is my hope for us all this season. I look forward to seeing many of you in the new year to return to a place where many are one. Sharing in a tradition that honors an individual who so passionately described life and its many virtues and wonders in a land known as Alba!

Cheers to you all!

Jonathan D. Wilson

Come Celebrate Scotland's Greatest Gift to the World

“The voice of Nature
loudly cries,

And many a message
from the skies,

That something in us never dies.”

- Robert Burns

On January 24, 2026 at 5:00 PM, we're gathering at the Denver Marriott South to honor Robert Burns: the ploughman poet who gave his voice to every one of us.

This isn't just dinner. It's a night to remember why Burns still matters 229 years after his death. We'll raise a dram to "The Immortal Memory." We'll recite his words; those radical, beautiful lines that said a poor man has as much worth as any lord, that love matters more than money, and that all of us, "Man to Man the world o'er, Shall brithers be for a' that."

Burns wrote for common people in the language they spoke. He celebrated farmers, lovers, rebels, and dreamers. He made Scottish culture something to be proud of when Scotland needed that most. And every January 25th, Scots everywhere, from Edinburgh to Colorado, gather to say: we remember. We celebrate. We carry this forward.

What to Expect:

- Performances by the Rocky Mountain Highland Dancers
- Denver & District Pipe Band
- Traditional Address to a Haggis
- Recitations of Burns's poetry
- Whisky ceremony and Toast to The Immortal Memory
- Three-course meal
- Dancing
- A night that connects us to something bigger than ourselves

From Our Members

- A Scottish Night in Colorado: My First Ceilidh: Ever wondered what happens at a ceilidh if you don't know the dances? Braeden Goggans walked into the St Andrew's Day celebration nervous and left with a story worth sharing. His first-timer's perspective on Scottish country dancing is exactly the kind of welcome our community offers.

- Bringing Scotland's New Year Spirit to Colorado: A Guide to Hogmanay and Beyond: Scots don't just celebrate New Year's, we throw ourselves into it like we've discovered a new whisky distillery. From first-footing to coal and shortbread, here's why Hogmanay is more than just another party, and how you can bring those traditions to Colorado.

Jean Finnie Casson
1930-2025

We're thinking of Jean Finnie Casson this Burns season. A lifetime SASC member who passed away in October, Jean asked that memorial gifts support the St. Andrew Society of Colorado Heritage Fund and the other causes she championed. We're grateful she was part of our community.

Clan Feature

Burns's True Affection: The Common People

Crest: Royal Badge of Scotland

Motto: A Man's a Man for A' That

Region: The heart of working Scotland: Ayrshire, Dumfriesshire, and the Scottish Borders.

Clan Chief: As it no longer has a clan chief, it is an armigerous clan.

A tartan for everyone: Baron Marchand of George Harrison & Co. in Edinburgh created the tartan in 1959 for the bicentenary of Robert Burns's birth, basing it on the Shepherd's Check with the "hodden grey and a' that" overcheck and green for the fields.

Burns didn't claim kinship with powerful clans or ancient chiefs—he claimed kinship with something far more radical: every person. Born in Ayrshire to a tenant farmer, he spent his life among ploughmen, shepherds, milkmaids, and those who worked the land. And through his poetry, he elevated these "common" people to heroes.

He loved the Lowlands: not the glamorous Highlands of clan chiefs and castles, but the working farmlands of Ayrshire and Dumfriesshire. The fields where ordinary Scots labored. The streams (burns) that gave so many their names. The parishes where people gathered, danced, drank, and lived.

His famous lines say it all: "The rank is but the guinea's stamp, The Man's the gowd for a' that."

Burns didn't write for aristocrats. He wrote in Scots rather than English so that shepherds and farmers could see themselves in poetry. He made cottage life, rural traditions, and working-class dignity the subjects worthy of art.

This is why the Burns name transcends clan politics: It belongs to the people Burns championed: the farmers, workers, dreamers, rebels, and anyone who believes that worth comes from character, not title.
